William Pitt Sotheby's Danbury brokerage manager Adele Unger honored with 'Out of the Box' award

Danbury — William Pitt Sotheby's International Realty recently announced that Danbury brokerage manager Adele Unger was awarded the firm's Out of the Box award.

The honor is designated for out of the box thinking and is given to those who go above and beyond or perform extraordinarily on their own initiative to do something positive for the company.

"Adele consistently demonstrates critical thinking, implements new ideas, brings attention to detail and makes processes easier, more profitable and beneficial for the company, contributing to the overall success of individual projects," said Paul Breunich, president and CEO of William Pitt and Julia B. Fee Sotheby's International Realty. "She has done so consistently over time, and I am pleased to recognize her consistent contributions over the past several years with this award."

Unger joins an exclusive list of past winners, which includes just three additional individuals.

Previous winners of the "Out of the Box" award include: William Pitt and Julia B. Fee Sotheby's International Realty Chief Operating Officer Vin Socci in 2011, former Director of Marketing Shannon Cain in 2015 and Chief Innovation Officer Lance Pendleton in 2016.

"I am pleased and humbled to accept this honor and I'm proud to join other past recipients of the Out of the Box award who have all made a difference at Sotheby's International Realty," Unger said. "It's such a privilege to work for a company that encourages progressive thinking and allows its employees to bring innovative ideas to the forefront."
