

AGENT PROFILE Ryan DeRubertis

Teaching clients when to buy

New real estate agent Ryan DeRubertis just signed on with William Pitt Sotheby's. He is also a History Teacher at Bethel High school.

He signed on with the well-known real estate company because it was a great fit and the office's associate broker Adele Unger was receptive to that experience as teacher, he said.

His real estate philosophy is to educate and work in the best interest of the clients. "I want to be known as an organized, accessible, and dependable agent," DeRubertis added.

"Being a teacher has taught me to work a variety of different personalities. What works for some people may not work for others. I feel I can offer that philosophy in real estate."

The agent enjoys researching and finding the best values for buyers. Additionally, he grew up in the Greater Danbury area, so he understands the local school systems, which is a great benefit to clients with children.

He finds the most rewarding part of this new career is meeting new people and providing an enjoyable and rewarding experience.

From the William Pitt Sotheby's Danbury office, DeRubertis serves the Greater Danbury area including the communities of Danbury, Bethel, New Fairfield/Sherman, Ridgefield, Newtown, Brookfield, Redding/Easton and New Milford.

His expertise is both buyer and seller

Business: William Pitt Sotheby's

Lives: New Fairfield

Office: Danbury

Expertise: Buyers and sellers

Contact: rderubertis@wpsir.com, (203) 482-0741, www.williampitt.com/agents/ryanderubertis/representation.

He personally calls New Fairfield home where he lives with his wife Nicole and two children. In his spare time, he coaches high school freshman basketball and enjoys spending time with family and friends.

In addition to his real estate license, he has a bachelors in history from the University of Connecticut, and a masters in education from the University of Bridgeport.