

This week: Greek Revivals

1 ► Chappaqua, N.Y.

The portico of this 1904 Neoclassic Greek Revival features six double-height Doric columns. The eight-bedroom house has the original egg-and-dart and dentil ceiling moldings, herringbone wood floors, French doors, a formal library, and a kitchen with mahogany cabinets. The 9.6-acre property includes a one-bedroom guesthouse overlooking Tercia Pond, and a pool with a waterfall. $2,295,000. Jessica Murphy and Melissa Colabella, Julia B. Fee/ Sotheby's International Realty, (914) 295-3500

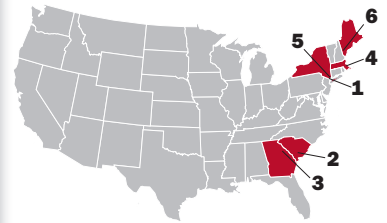

2 ◀ Walterboro, S.C. The Paul-Wichman House is on the National Register of Historic Places. The three-bedroom home, built in 1847 from longleaf heart pine harvested on site, features 12-foot windows, a grand center hall, pocket doors, marble fireplaces, and a whole-house generator. The 5-acre property, in the town's historic district, includes four original outbuildings, a stream, magnolias, pines, 100-year-old camellias, and a sweet-olive tree. $975,000. Calvert Huffines, The Huffines Co., (843) 893-7118

3 ► Washington, Ga. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Archibald Campbell was born in this landmarked 1787 home, which in 1841 got a Greek Revival makeover. The furnished five-bedroom house has an elevator, two master suites opening to a sunroom, and a lower level with exposed beams and brick floors. The 1-acre lot includes a carriage house. $1,350,000. Deborah Rainey-Pettay, Georgia Realty Sales, (706) 678-5263

4 ▶ North Hanover, Mass. Just three families have lived in this home since it was built in 1839. The five-bedroom house, set on 2.3 acres, features crown molding, ceiling medallions, a spiral staircase to the cupola, dual parlors with Egyptian-motif marble fireplaces, and a kitchen with modern appliances in period style. $899,900. Mary Koontz-Daher, Daher Companies/Weichert Realtors, (978) 688-7251

5 ◀ Grandview, N.Y. This five-bedroom home 45 minutes from New York City offers views of the Hudson River from most rooms. The house, built in 1810, has Doric columns, a wraparound veranda, five period fireplace mantels, and a chef's kitchen with high-end appliances and soapstone counters. The 1.4-acre property includes mature gardens, a 100-year-old cherry tree, a five-car garage, and a gunite pool with spa. $1,999,000. Richard Ellis, Ellis Sotheby's International Realty, (914) 393-0438

6 ▶ Limerick, Maine This brick house, a short drive from Lake Arrowhead, was built by Jeremiah Mason, a state legislator, in 1859. Currently a 10-bedroom inn, it features oversized windows, chandeliers, decorative fireplaces, and tin ceilings. The 1.2-acre property has a three-apartment carriage house. $425,000.
